Nothing prepared us for Summer 2020 - until now
Announcing the perfect app to help you navigate summer activities

Being in the right place at the right time has been the key to scores of success stories.

If only there were an app for that.

Introducing QEWS: an interactive, real-time app to help plan your day in a safe, socially distant and efficient way.

It's poised to address foot traffic the way WAZE revolutionized road traffic.

Heading to the Walmart, Costco, or bank today? The shortest route isn't a straight line; it's one that minimizes wait times.

We avoid lineups in the best of times, but in this unprecedented atmosphere, it's beyond inconvenient to be in a queue. It's a health danger. QEWS users can find and report a wait time or queue length at any location.

Designed to help keep families and communities safe, and to save time, "We're calling this community-sourcing rather than crowd-sourcing," says social media director, Luke MacLaurin. "It's technology with an integral human touch solution."

The QEWS team believes it's people caring about each other that will keep everyone safe and power the app in every neighbourhood.

QEWS covers every business, government office, park or beach in North America. The app is perfect for retailers as well. "Employees assigned to control access at entrances can report wait times periodically, keeping them accurate. It's free added value to their customers."

Now the app includes updates based on user feedback and thousands of searches for wait times. New features include the ability to search for and report crowds at parks, beaches and large public gatherings and a rewards program.

Qews, a free app available for both Android and Apple devices, launches in Canada and the United States today.
